

Flea Facts

- About 1600 species of fleas have been identified throughout the world.
- Only one flea species – the cat flea – accounts for almost all the fleas found on cats and dogs in the United States.
- Fleas account for more than half of all dermatological conditions requiring veterinary assistance.
- Fleas that have fed on rodents may transmit diseases.
- Fleas are excellent jumpers, leaping vertically up to 7 inches and horizontally 13 inches.
- Adult fleas cannot survive or lay eggs without a blood meal, but may live from 2 months to 1 year without feeding.
- The female flea consumes 15 times her own body weight in blood daily.
- One flea can bite an animal 400 times in one day.
